Super Story

Rabbi Levi Yitzchak of Berditchev looked forward to Seder night. One year, after the Seder was over, Rabbi Levi Yitzchak went to sleep, content: He had conducted a great Seder with all his students around the table. He fell into a deep sleep and dreamt a strange dream. In the dream, Eliyahu is talking with angels, telling them of the Seders he saw in Jewish homes. One of the angels asks, "But which was the most important Seder that you visited? Was it Rabbi Levi Yitzchak's?" Eliyahu answered, "Rabbi Levi Yitzchak's Seder was full of interesting discussions on the Haggadah, but it can't compare to the Seder of Chaim the water carrier."

At that Rabbi Levi Yitzchak woke up with a start and jumped out of bed. He had to speak to this water carrier named Chaim right away. Eventually, a student found Chaim in a tumbledown hut at the edge of the town and brought him to Rabbi Levi Yitzchak's house. Rabbi Levi Yitzchak welcomed the puzzled man, and offered him a chair opposite him. Then he asked, "Tell me, my good Chaim, what happened last night at your Seder?"

Ashamed, Chaim answered: "What kind of a Seder could a simple, tired fellow like me have? Yesterday, erev Pesach, was a very hard day. All the houses were being cleaned, and water was in great demand. I walked backwards and forwards all day, trying to supply everyone with water. At the end of the day, I came home exhausted. My wife Rachel was lighting the candles and I took a rest but fell into a deep sleep. When I awoke it was nearly dawn! Of course, I quickly woke up Rachel. There was no time now to read the whole Haggadah, so we drank the four cups of wine, and ate the matzah and some maror, and with whatever time I had left, I pleaded with Hashem: 'Hashem, please forgive a simple ignorant man. All I know is that you delivered us in the past from the cruel hands of the Egyptians - you have led us out of slavery to freedom. And now we are all in exile again, and I ask you with all my heart to lead us again into freedom!'"

Rabbi Levi Yitzchak put his hand on Chaim's shoulder and turned to his students and said, "It is extremely important to follow the order of the Seder, but now we know why this man's Seder was the most pleasing to Eliyahu. In his one sentence Seder, he found favor in Hashem's eyes because of the depth of his sincerity and his commitment to do the best that he knew."
